What I bring to an executive office

C-Suite & Board support
Partnered directly with a Chairman, Strategic Advisor, CEO and Head of Finance across 3+ business entities.

Fundraising & investor relations
Supported investor communications and prepared corporate documents and data rooms for a ~$60M-revenue F&B company.

Corporate governance
Ran Board and Shareholder meetings end to end and standardized governance documentation.

Project execution
Managed lifecycles for construction, renovation and strategic corporate initiatives.

Operations at scale
Coordinated nationwide product launch campaigns for a network of 4,000+ distributors.

AI-enabled workflows
Uses ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini and Notion to speed up executive reporting and routine operations.

01 · ACCOUNTS PAYABLE

Invoice & payment tracker

THE PROBLEM

Invoices from 16 suppliers arrive by email, vendor portals, paper and weekly statements for 6 kitchen locations. Each supplier has its own terms, pay day and late-fee rules.

WHAT I BUILT

One tracker with an invoice log, automatic due dates and payment alerts, a summary by location and a weekly pay-day schedule by vendor. I use Claude to find new invoices in the AP mailbox and log them, with a link to each file.

OUTCOME

About 150 invoice entries were logged in the tracker's first four weeks. The notes on each entry caught problems before any money went out: a statement still charging about $3,700 for goods marked out of stock, a request to pay a new payee (held until confirmed by phone), and invoices about to reach a 1.5% monthly late fee.

02 · CONSTRUCTION

Multi-site construction budget

THE PROBLEM

Six kitchen build-outs in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania run at the same time, each with its own contractor milestones, tenant-improvement allowance and payments.

WHAT I MAINTAIN

A budget summary across all sites (budget, paid to date, remaining, cash need), a sheet for each site broken down by category and milestone, and one combined payments log.

OUTCOME

Leadership sees budget, paid to date and remaining cash need for all six sites in one view before approving each contractor payment.

03 · RECONCILIATION

Vendor statement check

THE PROBLEM

Each month, vendor statements for every location have to match what accounting has recorded before anything is paid.

WHAT I MAINTAIN

A monthly matrix of about 25 core suppliers × 4 kitchens that compares the statement total with the accounting system and shows the difference. Any gap is highlighted and followed up with the vendor.

OUTCOME

Every core supplier is checked for every kitchen each month, so a missing credit or a duplicate invoice shows up as a highlighted difference before payment, not after.

06 · FACILITIES

Service calls & troubleshooting

THE PROBLEM

Each kitchen depends on recurring services: internet, utilities, trash, pest control, linens, oil pickup and hood cleaning. When one fails, it has to be fixed before the next service.

WHAT I DO

Call service providers through Aircall to book visits and report problems at each location. I log every call with the ticket number, the technician's time window and the next step. A facilities sheet keeps each location's providers, accounts and monthly costs in one place.

OUTCOME

Kitchen managers have one person to contact about any service problem, and every open ticket is followed until it is resolved.

04 · CALENDAR

Executive calendar

THE PROBLEM

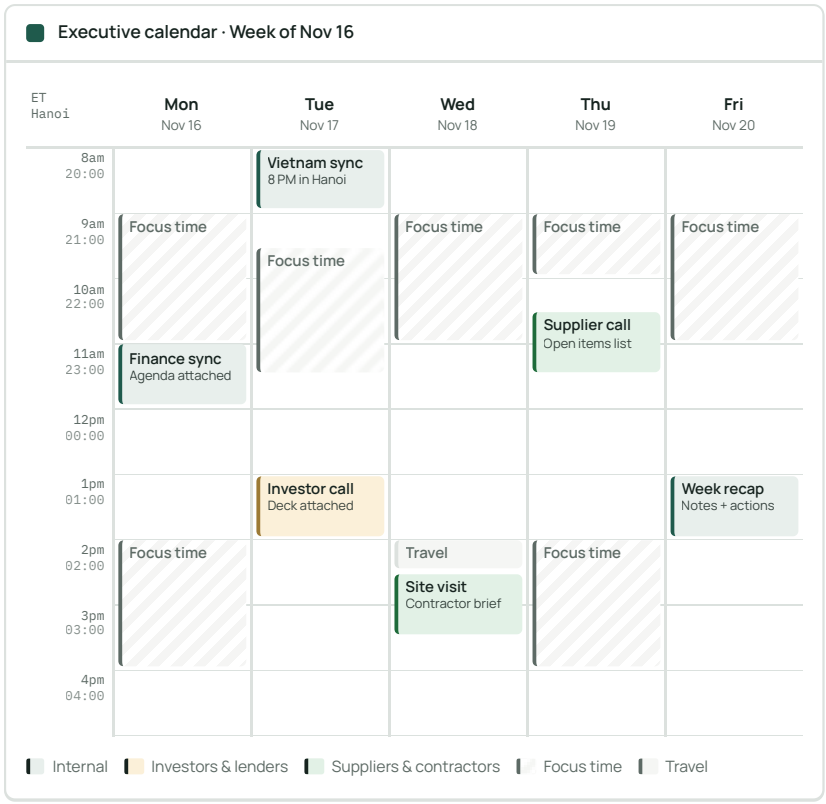

A week of 4 to 6 meetings with internal teams, investors, contractors and suppliers, between a New York office and a team in Vietnam 12 hours ahead.

WHAT I DO

Color-code the calendar by type of meeting, protect blocks of focus time, book cross-time-zone calls in hours that work for both sides, and attach the agenda and briefing documents to each invite before the meeting.

OUTCOME

Meetings stay at 4 to 6 a week, so most of the week is kept for focused work. The executive walks into every meeting with the documents already in the invite.

05 · MEETING NOTES

Notes to action items

THE PROBLEM

After a meeting, decisions and follow-ups get lost when nobody writes down who does what and by when.

WHAT I DO

Record with an AI note-taker (Otter, Gemini or Claude), then edit the draft into a short summary. Each action item gets an owner and a deadline, and I send the notes the same day.

OUTCOME

Everyone leaves with the same list. I follow up on each item and update its status until it is done.
